Basic Concepts of Western Alliance Seen Shaken by Debate on Missiles

In the midst of a discussion about pacifism and church influence, Jacques Huntzinger, the Socialist Party official responsible for its international relations, suggested that the role played by the German churches really relates "to the German question" — shorthand for its division, desire for reunification and a yearning to return to Germany's historical equidistance between East and West

Seen in the most schematic terms, France does not want a West Germany whose guiding passion would be resolution of the German national question by accommoda-tion with the Soviet Union. In the same way, France feels its own security would be in danger if West Germany deserted its traditional foreign policy guidelines of security within the Atlantic alliance and West European integration.

Just as schematically, advisers of Mr. Mitterrand tend to see the campaign against the missiles in West Germany as opposing these two West-oriented and East-oriented poles, and they are distressed by an increasing number of French what they regard as the movement political figures are willing to say of the Social Democratic Party tothat the deep political sense of the ward accommodation, away from

Scientists Say Nuclear War Could Trigger Ice Age

By Philip J. Hilts

Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Nuclear war involving most of the long-range missiles in the U.S. and Soviet arsenals could trigger a global climatic disaster that could wipe out bil-lions of people and perhaps mankind, according to scientists at a conference that ended here Tuesday.

The scientists released evidence Monday that the detonation of 100 megatons would trigger a "dark nuclear winter" during which a cloud of debris would block the sun and cause temperatures to plunge,

The conference on the long-term biological consquences of nuclear war was sponsored by 31 groups, including the American Institute of Biological Sciences, the Canadian Nature Federation, the Smithsonian Institution and others.

long-range missiles on both sides, temporary ice-age conditions over at least half the Earth would be inevitable.

Over the past 18 months, Wesiern Europe-an and U.S. scientists, using mathematical models of the atmosphere and computers, have repeatedly calculated in detail what would happen to the world's climate after a

The world's nuclear arsenal contains 12,000 to 15,000 megatons, the scientists said. Each megaton is equal to a million tons of TNT. The bomb that destroyed Hiroshima was equivalent to 12,500 tons of TNT.

Carl Sagan, a Cornell University astronomer and one of the group's leaders, said that a war in which 5,000 megatons were detonated would produce the following.

 About 225 million tons of smoke would Scientists at the sessions said that, if a be spewed into the air over several days, the smoke could spread to that hemisphere.

 At least half the Earth would become as dark as night. Temperatures would plunge, freezing standing water up to a depth of three feet (one meter). The temperature would remain below freezing for up to three months, and probably would not return to normal for more than a year.

• The lack of sun could eliminate photosynthesis, the ability of plants to turn sunlight into energy, the key process that supports life on Earth. The conditions would kill plant life and, in turn, animals that feed on plants. Thus, carnivorous animals could starve. The entire food chain might collapse. Although previous studies of nuclear war have suggested that the Southern Hemi-sphere would be relatively unaffected, new calculations of climatic circulation show that

 The amount of radiation deposited great distances from nuclear explosions has apparently been underestimated tenfold.

· After the darkness and cold, another danger would emerge: Chemical reactions from nuclear blasts would cause a major breakdown of the ozone layer in the atmosphere. Ozone protects the Earth from the sun's harmful ultraviolet rays. More ultraviolet radiation would damage the vision and immune systems of any surviving animals.

The detonation of 5,000 megatons would require the United States to fire almost all its ong-range submarine and land-based missiles and for the Russians to fire about half of

One of the more surprising findings of the scientists' report is that there appears to be a "nuclear-war threshold," above which global catastrophe would be triggered. That level comes roughly at 100 megatons.

U.S. to Lift Some of Its Sanctions On Poland White House Says It'll Discuss Debt

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches WASHINGTON -The Reagan administration plans to lift some of the economic sanctions imposed against Poland after martial law was declared two years ago, the deputy White House press secre-tary, Larry M. Speakes, said Tues-

Mr. Speakes said the removal of the restrictions would be "measured steps for some measured easing of restrictions." He was referring to the end of martial law in July and the release of a number of political prisoners, along with Pope John Paul II's visit in June. But he also made it clear that the administration was not fully satisfied with the Polish concessions.

Among the sanctions to be lifted, officials said, is the U.S. refusal to join other Western countries in discussing the renegotiation of Po-land's official debt to the West, estimated at $11 billion. The United States is owed about $2 billion.

In Warsaw, meanwhile, an amnesty for political opponents of the government expired with no official announcement that it would be

Before the amnesty expired at midnight Monday, the authorities had strongly hinted that it might be prolonged to tempt more dissidents and activists of the banned Solidarity union to surrender.

The possibility of an extension was being discussed by parliamentary committees and could become law on Friday, according to government sources quoted by Reuters. It could be retroactive to Tnes-day, they said. On Monday, Warsaw's provincial prosecutor said: "Whatever the final deadline for coming out of hiding, the amnesty does not end

The government proclaimed the amnesty in July, when it lifted the martial law regulations that had been imposed in December 1981. In his statement on the lifting of U.S. sanctions, Mr. Speakes cau-tioned that the administration was not entirely satisfied with the Po-lish liberalization measures.

"The pope's meeting there was a good one and there have been release of some political prisoners. but there is still as yet no dialogue between the elements of the society in Poland which we want and there has not been a significant easing of the restrictions," he said. Regarding the U.S. agreement to discuss renegotiation of Poland's government debts, an official said that it had come partly as a result of urging by U.S. allies in Europe, The Associated Press reported. "They want to be paid. If we don't reschedule the debt, they don't have to repay them." Officials quoted by The New York Times said the United States had agreed last week to discuss Poland with other members of the Club of Paris, a group of industrial-ized countries that meets periodically to discuss rescheduling of government-to-government debts.

The meeting would concern the renegotiation of Poland's debt to Western governments, the officials said. A new schedule for repaying the debts is needed before Poland could qualify for new loans from Western governments.

In addition, Poland will be allowed to negotiate new fishing rights in U.S. waters, they said. Under the sanctions, the Poles lost the right to take fish in U.S. waters. They had been allowed to harvest 220,000 tons a year previously.

Other sanctions will remain in effect, officials said. These include a continuation of the ban on the Polish airline, Lot, from landing in the United States, a prohibition on new economic aid and a ban on the sale of high technology.

However, the administration is taking the position that if Poland makes further concessions, other sanctions may be lifted as well.

The official announcement of the relaxation of the sanctions had been planned for noon Monday, The Times reported, but was delayed in the face of sharp criticism from the AFL-CIO.

Lane Kirkland, head of the union federation, said Monday that there should be no relaxation of sanctions until all political prisoners were freed, free labor unions were again permitted and a dia-logue begun between Polish an-thorities and Solidarity.

On May 1, 1982, President Ronald Reagan said that he would not lift the sanctions until the Polish government ended martial law, released the prisoners and "reopened a dialogue with Solidarity, led by

Officials say the administration has given up hope that the government will agree to reopen a dia-logue with either Solidarity or Mr. Walesa, who was recently awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. (AP, NYT, Reuters)

The measure, approved by a 403-23 vote, now goes to the Senate, where a spokesman for the Foreign Relations Committee said it was expected to be acted upon quickly.

Mr. Reagan regards the 1973 law as an encroachment on his constitutional powers as commander-inchief, but it is not certain whether he would veto or sign the bill if it reached his desk.

The act requires that the president withdraw troops within 60 days. That timetable could be extended to 90 days if the president says the extra time is needed to withdraw troops safely. Congress could also authorize a longer stay. Meanwhile, two companies of

The council had earlier affirmed the right of free navigation and commerce in international waters and called on the belligarents to cease hostilities immediately. The resolution was approved on a 12-0 vote, with abstentions by Malta, Nicaragua and Pakistan.

Iran has repeatedly warned that any damage to its vital interests will result in the closing of the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the Gulf. According to industry sources, about 80 oil tankers are lying idle in the Gulf of Oman after being told by their owners not to enter the strait matil they have firm orders to pick up cargoes.

Fire Kills 6 on U.S. Carrier Near Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) - Six navy personnel were killed and 35 injured Tuesday when flames raced through an engine room aboard the inversit carrier Ranger in the Arabian Sea, the navy said.

The fire was extinguished within about an hour and the 79,000-ton ship, which normally has a crew of more than 4,900 officers and men, continued to operate in the approaches to the Gulf. The navy said most of the injured suffered from smoke inhalation, minor burns and heat exhaustion, it said the men were not in serious condition and would be treated on the carrier.

Navy officials were unable to say what caused the fire. It will be investigated by a board of inquiry. Officials said the ship will remain on station and will be able to launch and recover its aircraft.

Sinking of U.S. Oil Ship Is Confirmed

BEIJING (UPI) — The U.S. oil drilling ship Glomar Java Sea, leased to the Atlantic Richfield Co., sank near its drill site last week in the stormy South China Sea, officials confirmed Tuesday. All 81 crew members — 42 Americans, 24 Chinese, four Britons and one Australian — were missing and feared drowned.

The sunken wreckage of the ship, missing since Oct. 25, was identified by Chinese vessels using special sonar equipment, said a spokesman for the drilling ship's owner, Global Marine Inc., in Houston. The weeklong search for survivors, still hampered by foul weather, continued Tuesday Taking part in the search were more than a dozen Chinese ships, three Vietnamese ships and three U.S. Navy P-3 Orion search planes. Vietnam sent vessels to search its own nearby waters after refusing to allow Chinese ships to enter, diplomatic sources said. Vietnam has accused China of violating its sovereignty by allowing U.S. companies to operate

Murdoch Buys Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Sun-Times, the nation's seventh-largest daily newspaper, was sold Tuesday to Rupert Murdoch's publishing company for $90 million in cash, Field Enterprises announced. The sale includes the Field Newspaper Syndicate and the newspaper's down-

90 Salvadoran Troops Killed in Battle

SAN SALVADOR (Combined Dispatches) - Ninety troops were killed in a fierce battle that was taking place Tuesday between leftist rebels and the army around Ciudad Barrios, a major town in the eastern part of the country, military sources said. The toll was one of the highest reported in a single battle in the Salvadoran civil war.

The battle began Monday night after rebels captured the town, which is 90 miles (150 kilometers) east of San Salvador, in the province of San Mignel, the sources said. They did not say how many soldiers had been wounded and made no mention of rebel casualt

U.S. Adds Security Devices at Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Capitol police readjusted metal detectors and installed sensitive bomb detecting equipment in mid-October after a tourist was arrested in the House of Representatives gallery with a nemade bomb under his shirt, it was learned Tuesday. The authorities identified the man as Israel Rubinowits, 22, an Israeli, and said he threatened to blow up the Capitol when approached by the police. The House sergiant at arms, Jack Russ, said the bomb brought to the building Oct. 18 "was not a dud" and failed to explode because the man "had not placed his wiring properly."

Mr. Rabinowirs was charged with making threats of bodily harm and held in lieu of a $25,000 bond. His court-appointed lawyer, Carl Angelis, said at a District of Columbia Superior Court hearing that Mr. Rubinowits wanted to address Congress about the problem of world hunger.

Senate in U.S. Rejects Nuclear-Freeze Talks And Raising Debt Limit

By Eleanor Randolph and Karen Tumulty Los Angeles Times Service

WASHINGTON - The Senate has rejected a resolution demand-Soviet Union.

The action Monday came on one of a series of amendments to a bill to raise the national debt ceiling. The entire bill subsequently failed, 56 to 39, officially putting the nation on what the Senate majority leader, Howard H. Baker Jr., said is a "cash receipts basis."

The Tennessee Republican offered a motion to reconsider the bill in the hope of giving senators time to work out their differences over the measure. The nuclear-freeze resolution.

which lost in a procedural vote by 58 to 40, called for an immediate mutual and verifiable freeze in the production and deployment of nuclear weapons by both superpowers. In rejecting the resolution, the Senate backed President Ronald Reagan's policies and rejected the arguments of Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Democrat of Massachusetts, who accused Mr. Reagan of waging "Cold War 11."

Nothing could be more calculated to undermine the efforts of the president and his negotiators to achieve reductions in nuclear arms," Senator John G. Tower said of the freeze measure. Mr. Tower, a Texas Republican, is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The freeze vote was part of a political free-for-all in the last few days as senators attached unrelated amendments to the deht-ceiling bill. Although a delay in passing it would not bring government operauons to a standsull, some administration officials feared it would cause turmoil in financial markets and cost the government $250 million in additional interest on the federal deht.

As midnight approached Mon-day, the ostensible deadline for passing the bill, some senators indicated that they would protest the huge deficits by refusing to raise the federal debt limit to $1.45 tril-

tion from the present $1.4 trillion

Although most congressional of-ficials said privately that the bill could be stalled several days without provoking a financial crisis, the White House Monday released a ing that the Reagan administration negotiate a nuclear freeze with the Donald T. Regan to Mr. Baker that said raising the deht limit was "absolutely essential" to the government and the economy.

The House has already voted to raise the deht ceiling.

Even though it has no legislative impact, the freeze amendment was by far the most important amend-ment on the debt bill because proponents wanted to use the recorded vote as a test for the 1984 elections. Senator Mark O. Hattield, an Oregon Republican and one of the bill's sponsors, said earlier this year: "Once we know where each member of Congress truly stands on this issue, we will be better able to effectively channel the energies of concerned citizens across the

The House adopted a similar resolution in May by 278 to 149.

Senator Alan Cranston, Democrat of California, who has made a nuclear freeze the key issue of his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the vote was in response to "the peoples" call" for an end to the arms race. He said 20 million people bave said they are in favor of a mutual, verifiable freeze.

Panel Refuses Chemical Arms Funds; Vote Could Defeat Reagan's Plans

By T.R.Reid Washington Post Service

Appropriations Committee has devered what could be a fatal blow to the Reagan administration's plans to resume production of chemical weapons, by voting 14 to 12 to bar any funds to make new chemical shells and bombs.

The vote Monday was a vid for the committee chairman, Senator Mark O. Hatfield, Republican of Oregon, Mr. Hatfield had lobbied against the funding for weeks with his committee colleagues.

Mr. Hatfield said he also has enough votes to defeat chemical weapons if defenders try to restore funds on the floor.

Hope in Argentina Wise Diplomacy Needed

Argentina did more Sunday than elect a president. It buried the myth of Peronist omnipotence at the polls by giving a solid majority to Raul Alfonsin, an able and committed democrat. By reaching out to a working-class electorate, Mr. Alfonsin's Radical Civic Union has won the broad mandate it needs to govern. This is inspiring news for Argentina, South America and the democratic cause.

Mr. Alfonsin will need all his skills to realize the promise of his election. Argentina's economy is in ruins, with inflation roaring at 800 percent, a jobless rate of 12 percent and $10 pillion in public-sector debt. Its moral capital has been dissipated in the war over the Falklands and the "dirty war" against terrorism waged by the outgoing military rulers. Working for the president-elect is a widespread yearning for change. After seven years of military misrule, there is no civilian support for a return of the generals. Peronists had never lost a free election since the party's birth in 1945. But now a majority of the Argentine people have voted for a party committed to reforming the unions whose entrenched leaders have been the bosses and main beneficia-ries of Peronism. As the election confirms, the mischief of that power has finally become evident even to Peronist voters.

Mr. Alfonsin will have his hands full carrying out promises to hold new union elections and to void the amnesty the armed forces tried to create for its crimes during the war against terror. He also needs to deliver on his pledge to renegotiate the crushing foreign debt and to renew talks with Britain on the eventual status of the Falklands.

Mr. Alfonsin deserves the sympathy and support of the United States. Argentina will need to stretch out its debt repayments and seek an easing of the austerity mandated by the International Monetary Fund. More liberal trade policies can also help.

Special circumstances justify this treatment. They also justify help from the British victors in the South Atlantic war. Only once in 53 years has an elected Argentine government completed its term. The nation has been haunted by instability, cranky nationalism, cruelty and class division. What happens there will reverberate in Uruguay, Brazil, Chile and beyood. The opening in Buenos Aires is a worthy challenge for a wise diplomacy.

- THE NEW YORK TIMES.

... Amid Dangerous Politics

Argentina's election returns will be read with relief by its friends abroad - not to mention its creditors. This convincing victory by Mr. Alfonsin offers the country its most omising opportunity in decades to return to stable democracy. For more than a generation it has swung erratically between Peronista demagoguery and military repression, at an immense cost in lives and wealth. But the returns now give Mr. Alfonsin reason to believe that a large majority of his country will follow him in rejecting the destructive traditions of the recent past.

The most dangerous political questions immediately facing him concern the investigation of the disappearance of thousands of people during the past seven years of military rule. Mr. Alfonsin proposes to prosecute military officers for crimes against buman rights. That intention will test his skill in dealing with armed forces that, although badly fragmented, are by no means unable to defend themselves.

As for the Argentine economy, inflation is soaring towards 1,000 percent and most people's incomes are falling. Argentina's foreign bankers will give the new government time to ge! organized, but before long it will have to devise ways to service the country's debt.

The bankers have reason to be grateful that they will not be dealing with the Peronists.

They can usefully express that gratitude by seeing whether they can improve the terms on which those loans are being extended.

Argentina has been this hemisphere's great example of a country that has kicked away great prosperity through perverse and repeated political mistakes. At the turn of the century. Argentina had a standard of living at least as high as that of the United States and probably higher. Today its output per capita is about one-fifth the U.S. level and, for that matter, half of Singapore's. In resources it has always been one of the world's richest economies. An immensely productive agriculture makes it one of the world's great exporters of wheat and meat. It produces more oil than several of OPEC's members. Its people are educated and technically competent. Yet for half a century, living conditions for most Argentines have deteriorated steadily in relation to the rest of the world, and in the past several years they have fallen sharply in absolute terms as well.

The most promising aspect of Mr. Alfonsin's victory is that his previously middle-class party has been able to win wide support from industrial labor. He seems to have bridged one of the deepest of the social divisions that contributed to the past political record. For

Argentina, it is a moment of great hope. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

Who Gives the Orders?

The argument over the purposes and conseouences of the Grenada invasion is going to go on for some time. But there is another matter that needs to be addressed. With the Cuban military resistance now ended, why are thousands of U.S. military men remaining on the island? What is their mandate? Who gave it? What is the relationship of the military commend to the civilian authorities who are supposedly giving guidance? Who is in charge? From the start the uniformed military seems to have had an unusually large degree of control over this operation, notwithstanding its political essence. In public the secretary of defense has been disconcertingly deferential to the supposed prerogatives of his commanders in the field. Far from stating and conducting a policy ried to specific political objectives, civilian officials have found themselves in the position simply of providing a rolling series of after-the-fact rationales for an operation that the military chose to conduct in its own way. There is no sign, for instance, that civilian authorities did essential planning on such sensitive subjects as repatriating the Cuban prisopers, handling the captured members of the Grenadian "People's Revolutionary Army" or forming a oew Grenadian government.

The barring of the press was another troubling aspect of this operation. For instance, it was reported that U.S. warplanes had inadvertently bombed a civilian mental hospital last Tuesday and that this incident, with its dreadful toll, had not been known to the "senior presidential adviser" who told reporters in Washington on Thursday that there were no civilian casualties in the operation.

The whole idea of conducting an operation without the presence of the public's representatives in the media had suggested a military determined to free itself at least temporarily from the normal tuggings and haulings of a democratic society. We oote that it evidently took a direct order from the president over the weekend to induce the military to open operations in Grenada to broad media coverage.

In Lebanon the disaster at the Marine quarters seems partly attributable to a situation in which the military was forced to operate under too tight a set of political constraints. Such is the degree of military autonomy in the Grenada affair, however, that it almost seems the military insisted as a condition of taking part that it had to run the thing its own way. Did the president make a grant of operational autonomy to the military on this occasion? If he did it has some on too long. It is vital that he reassert the civilian political purposes of the Grenada invasion, and terminate it

Role of the Marines in Lebanon Must Be Explained

WASHINGTON — More than a week after the tragedy at the Marine headquarters in Beirut, two fundamental questions remain unanswered: What is America trying to achieve in Lebanon and what is the role of U.S. forces in achieving it? President Reagan owes the military and the public deep reflection on these issues. Only then can the United States hope to formulate a sensible policy for both the short and the longer run in Lebanon. The marines should never have been introduced into the hostile Lebanese situation without a well-defined mission and sufficient forces to carry out the mission. The Reagan administration acted in spite of warnings from military experts, in and out of government, when it placed U.S. fighting men in the untenable simation they now occupy in Berrut.

No experienced observer believed that I,600 marines, together with the other components of the multinational force, could stabilize a comtry torn by decades of factionalism and bitter civil war. The marines have come to be viewed

By Sam Nunn and their lives have become hostage to the political whims and terrorist instincts of the innumerable factions that plague Lebanon. What should the United States do now? A precipitous, total withdrawal would reward the terrorists who committed this act. But continuation of the status quo would mean that the marines would remain vulnerable and concerned above all with self-defense.

The short-term priority must be to insure the salety of U.S. troops by greatly enhancing secu-rity measures. The United States should make clear to the Gemayel government that the marines were never intended to stand in the front lines of fire. The Lebanese Army must provide that defense, while U.S. troops and the rest of the peacekeeping force stand behind it, giving moral and symbolic support. A minimum condition for continued U.S. presence should be that the Lebanese Army take immediate action by some combatants as a party to the conflict to clear out and police the areas from which short-range attacks on the Marine compound have come. If the Lebanese Army cannot achieve this, what hope is there that it can ever establish control over the entire country?

A second, intermediate-term task is the phasing out of U.S. ground forces. It may be appropriate for U.S. troops to be replaced.
United Nations contingent now in southern Lebanon. If the United Nations is unwilling or ate for U.S. troops to be replaced by the incapable of performing this task, a multilateral force drawn from neutral European and Third World nations should be considered. Such forces are more likely to be perceived as neutral and less likely to become targets. Meanwhile, the phasing out of U.S. troops must be closely coordinated with France, Britain and Italy.

Third, in the longer term, the United States must maintain a strong diplomatic and military posture in the region, a posture that will contribute to the stability of the Lebenese govern-military in contributing to this stability? I suggest that the mission of U.S. forces should be to deter any aggression by Syria or its surrogates. That limited mission can best be carried out by the naval firepower of the Sixth Fleet and by stationing most of the troops offshore.

The guns or aircraft of the Sorth Fleet can threaten Syrian positions in the Bekan Valley or even Damascus itself. Syria must know that it will risk retaliation for direct aggression against Lebanon or for continuing to permit extreme terrorist groups to operate from ground it holds. The deterrent value of U.S. firepower against such aggression will increase once the marines are no longer hostages on the ground. These three steps will not solve Lebanon's internal disputes, but neither will present U.S. policy — which is extremely costly.

Reagan Bets On Gunboat Diplomacy

By David S. Broder

Washington — The first critical decision-point of Ronald Reagan's presidency came in August 1981, when he signed the tax-cut and budget measures that radically reoriented the direction of U.S. domestic policy. The Senate majority leader, Howard H. Baker Jr., a Tennessee Republican, said at the time that the United States and the Republican Party were oow committed to a "riverboat gamble."

Last week, wheo Mr. Reagan pledged that the Marine garrison would remain in Beirut on a peacekeeping mission of indefinite dura-tion and sent other troops ashore in an invasioo of Grenada, Mr. Baker was too busy defending the president to engage in phrase-making. But ob-viously this is the "gunboat gamble" of 1983 that matches the riverboat gamble of 1981.

Together, these two sets of deciconstitute a fundamental shift of U.S. economic, social, diplomatic and military policy. To say that they also define the issues on which next year's election will be fought is to state the obvious

It is impossible to imagine any of these policy choices being made by the previous Democratic administration. Whatever their differences oo other issues, the Democrats who are vying for the right to challenge Mr. Reagan in 1984 are almost unanimously opposed to these basic moves.

The first readings on the gunboat gamble, like the first readings on the riverboat gamble of 1981, are highly favorable to the president. Support for Mr. Reagan and his handling of foreign affairs has surged, according to the latest polls. But Mr. Reagan should not begin to count his winnings. The same voting public that cheered Mr. Reagan's tax cuts and his slowdown in domestic spending in 1981 turned strongly against his economic policy during the 1982 recession. It is only now, with inflation checked and a recovery well under way, that the verdict of public opinion is swinging back in the esident's direction.

It takes no soothsayer to predict that the swing of opinion on the gunboat gamble will be at least as sharp. Once the emotions of the moment so brilliantly evoked and heightened by Mr. Reagan in his television address last week - begin to fade, the actions of the president will be judged by their consequences. Those consequences will be felt at least through the next election.

My bunch is that the decisions on Grenada and Lebanon are likely to cut in opposite directions - and that the latter will have heavier weight. So far as I can judge from reporting in Iowa and New Hampshire and from studying the national polls, criticism of the Grenada move has not struck a responsive chord with the public.

Journalists are outraged at the censorship of coverage of the invasion. Some foreign policy experts are very concerned about the critical reaction in Europe and Latin America.

But most Americans appear to be-lieve that the assertion of U.S. power in the Caribbean may be of long-term value to the United States. Americans are old-fashioned enough to think that ever in a coclear age. there are still such things as spheres of influence and geographical areas of vital national interest. The Caribbean is such an area. The use of U.S. power against a regime of thugs backed by forces that want to weaken U.S. influence in the area does oot seem unconscionable.

Assuming the United States can get out of Grenada as fast as we got in, and leave behind a democratic, pro-Western regime, we may well have sent an important and useful signal by our action.

There are far deeper misgivings in the United States - and far reason for optimism — about Leba-non. The government America is backing there is a government in name only. More realistically, it is a mioority faction in a country wracked by deeply rooted religious and civil strife.

There is a case for sending an Deacekeeping force to that part of the world, but most Americans question the wisdom of making the Marines the backbone of that force. They can see - despite official denials - that as long as the Marines are there, they will be the targets for terrorism and a provocation to those who would like to further humiliate the United

Even in the emotions of the moment, many Americans were making the distinction between Mr. Reagan's actions in Grenada and his decision in Lebanon. When the "glory" of Grenada has faded, the grief of Lebanon will still be felt. And so will the political consequences.

Invasion Is a Blow to U.S.-Latin Ties

By Sol M. Linowitz

WASHINGTON — Some critical W questions remain unanswered about the invasion of Grenada, and many Latin American nations are groping for explanations.

The threshold question has to do with the role played by the United States in the invasion. If you accept the fact that the United States acceded to the "urgent, formal request" from the five member nations of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States and joined in the operation, the question still remains whether the United States should have done so in the light of U.S. commitments under the OAS Charter and the Rio Treaty.

Article II of the Rio Treaty, to which the United States is a signatory, states that "all members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state or in any other manner inconsistent with the principles of the United Nations". It is true that the members of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States are not signers of the Rio Treaty - but how does this relieve the United States of its own commitments and obligations? Indeed, should not the United States have proposed submitting the issue to the OAS for inter-American consideration and action rather than encouraging a small group of small nations in the use of force and the military intervention into another country? If there was evidence of a real threat to security and stability in the region, should it not have been put before the OAS for action pursuant to the provisions of the Rio Treaty?

Why, then, does the president say the United States had "no choice but

A second question concerns the nature and extent of the threat to the Americans on the island of Grenada and whether this action was required in order to ensure their safety. Understandably, the specter of the hostages in Iran was very much in mind when the action was Isunched. But where is the evidence as to the seriousness of the threat which made the sudden invasion essential? What evidence is there that in the few days since the assassination of former Prime Minister Maurice Bishop the danger to the lives of the Americans had become so great and their safety had to be undertaken? By the same token, if the United States had evidence that its citizens were in danger, why was it necessary to await a request from the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States to rescue them?

Third, why did the United States decide to proceed, despite the opposi-tion of Great Britain, which has a representative of the queen on the island in the person of the governor general? What consideration was given to the concerns expressed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher that such an action would be unwise and therefore Britain would not be-come party to it? Grenada Is No Trial for Nicaragua

By Tom Wicker

DALLAS - Was Romald Rea-D gan's invasion of Grenada a tri-al run for an invasion of Nicaragua? Even if that was intended, the results ought to disabuse the president of any such notion.

Indeed, Alan Riding of The New York Times, one of the most knowledgeable reporters on Central America, the Caribbean and Mexico reasons that the invesion of Grenada has isolated the United States among its principal allies, and earned it the disapproval of Great Britain, France and West Germany — not to mention Mexico and most of the other Latin

Speaking at a conference on Latin American questions organized by the Foundation for American Communications, Mr. Riding suggested that Mr. Reagan probably would not wish for the even more severe world con-demnation an invasion of Nicaragna surely would produce. The unity of the Western allies, moreover, could be badly damaged by U.S. military action against the Sandinistas. Already reports from Great Britain and West Germany suggest that public opposition to the scheduled U.S. deployment of medium-range missiles in Western Europe may have been reawakened by the adventure in Grenada. The Reagan administration's credibility in the pursuit of peace, these reports indicate, has been badly damaged.

In an invasion of Nicaragna, the United States would not have the excuse that it was acting primarily to save U.S. lives, since few U.S. citizens are resident in that country. And it is doubtful that Mr. Reagan could use the cloak of collective security, as the support of seven small Caribbean nans allowed him to do in the case of Grenada. He might hope for the sup-port of Honduras, a U.S. client state, and Guatemala, with its right-wing military government, but that kind of backing would carry little interna-tional weight

Ambassador Stephen W. Bosworth, chairman of the State Department's Policy Planning Board, pointed out to the Dallas conference that Grenada was surrounded by democratic governments - those that invited Mr. Reagan's invasion - that have undertaken to re-establish democracy on that island. This important condition, he noted, would be absent in the case of Nicaragua.

Besides, Mr. Bosworth pointedly asked, if a relatively few Cubans could mount the unexpectedly stiff resistance they did on tiny Grenada, what might the 6,000 Cubans he estimated were in Nicaragua do in resisting a U.S. invasion?

This question takes on added force in view of the possibility U.S. mili-tary officials have raised that Cuban and Grenadian forces may wage a long guerrilla campaign in the island's hilly interior. In much larger Nicaragua, with its mountain terrain and its jungles, a guerrilla war now would be as bloody and difficult as it was a half-century ago when U.S. Marines failed for years to defeat the forces of the Nicaraguan hero, Augusto Sandino. And much of the Nicaraguan population, as well as the Caban forces, could be expected to support guerrilla resis-tance following any initial U.S. suc-cess in an invasion of Nicaragua. Nicaraguans are not now responding favorably to the "contras," the "CIA-backed force waging war against the Sandinista regime from sanctuaries in Honduras. Given the long history of U.S. military intervention in their country, as well as U.S. backing of the repressive

Somoza regime, the likelihood is that most Nicaraguans would fight, not welcome, a new gringo invasion, even one mounted in the name of democ-

Mr. Reagan's domestic support for such an invasion — let alone for the guerrilla warfare sure to follow would be considerably less than it was for the smaller, more manageable operation against Grenada.

And after initial hesitation, the Democrats - including the House speaker, Thomas P. O'Neill - generally oppose the Grenada operation. Application of the War Powers Resolution to the invasion force, moreover, shows that both congressional parties have strong reservations; so does the congressional move to send against King today and in the 1960s a committee of inquiry to Grenada. No doubt Mr. Resgan reclaimed

Since Mr. Safire labored long in crunching Grenada, and sent a maing Grenada, and sent a mathe vineyards of the most spectacu- cho message to the world. Considered soberly, however, little to encourage baiters, he must have thousands of an invasion of Nicaragna can be found in the Grenada experience, or in the vastly different circumstances that would surround such an adventure in Central America.

The Count's Men, Sans Basie

By Michael Zwerin

ARIS - The Count Basic and Harry James big bands played on the same bill some years ago. Folklore has it that during the disussion about who would open and close the concert. Basic said: Maybe I should play my arrangements first."

They were not literally the same, but James's band was obviously Basie-based; his "One O'Clock lump" was strikingly similar to the Basic original and the Basic arrangers Neil Hefti, Ernie Wilkins and Buck Clayton also wrote for James. Now Clayton is directing a group called Les Count's Men.

"The idea," Clayton explains: came from the French promoter lean-Pierre Vignola, who wanted to get as many of us original Basic guys together as possible to play the old charts Basie doesn't play much these days. 'Maydays': Socialist Disillusion

By Sheridan Morley International Herald Tribune

ONDON - Those grown weary of seeing the vast open spaces of the main Barbican stage used time and again for warmed-over revivals from last year at Stratford can take heart: not only is there the continuing triumph of Derek Jaco-hi's "Cyrano," there is also (after almost 18 months) the first major new straight play conceived for this considerable platform ...

David Edgar's "Maydays" is an epic of socialist disillusion, as a cast of 50 leads the andience on an extraordinary tour of left-wing outpests in collapsing empires.

It's a play about crumbling ideologies, but it's also a very funny social history that benefits from what Edgar learned, in adapting "Nicholas Nickleby" for the Royal Shakespeare Company, about the dramatic possibilities inherent in covering a vast canvas with a huge cast and saying something haunting about the transience of the human spirit at the end of it all.

The ultimate triumph of "Maydays" is that there is no other the ater and no other company in the world where it could have been done; it is here and now at the Barbican, and should not be

In the West End, Penelope Keith has under her own management a welcome revival of "Hay Fever," written by Noel Coward in three days when he was 24 but probably in terms of sheer stage management the most mechanically brilliant of his plays, depending on a simple get-the-guests characle that would have been the envy of Wodehouse or Ben Travers. The origins of the story are well enough known: reallife house parties in the United States at which the flamboyant actress Laurette Taylor and her shy husband would bemuse whole gaggles of visitors, including the young Coward, by their blithe disregard for the basic rules of hospitality.

As the Taylor character, Judith Bliss, there's little doubt that Penelope Keith is the most perfect casting to be seen since the war: far closer to the right age than Edith Evans, who was a whole generation too old when she did the famous National Theatre revival of 1964, Keith also has precisely the right mix of ruthlessness and charm, one which he looks at the state of things that curiously eluded the infinitely between the sexes; drugs, alcohol,

C AIRO —The shape of international terror-ism is changing. It is becoming more lethal, more widespread, more difficult to contain. But, increasingly, it is a tool of the losers, renegades whose struggles seem doomed to achieve nothing except the finality of death.

Since 1962, according to U.S. government ligures, the works's 700 identifiable guerilla and terrorist groups have committed more than 8,000 major acts of political violence, a third of which resulted in death or injury. The number of incidents is growing each year and terrorism is expanding into previously unaffected countries:

Experts at the Rand Corp. research and consulting firm in Santa Monica, California, counted a record 450 terrorist actions last year, up 30 percent from 1981. And 1983 - the year of the car bomb — will be the bloodiest ever, largely because of the suicide attacks last month against U.S. and French installations in Beirut.

Terrorism was used successfully in such places as Algeria and Kenya to end colonial rule. But since then it has accomplished virtually nothing to enable various groups to realize their stated political goals. In many cases it has had the opposite effect of what the terrorists wanted. The deaths of more nearly 300 Americans and Frenchmen in Beirut, for example has not di-minished the resolve in Washington and Paris to remain in Lebanon.

Terrorists have not been able to achieve their long-range goals anywhere," said Brian Jenkins, an authority on terrorism at Rand. "They are able to attract publicity. They can cause alarm. They can create crises. Occasionally they can win a tactical victory.

"But thus far they have been unable to translate the consequences of terrorism into concrete political gain. In that sense, terrorism has failed. Yet terrorists persist. And that is the paradox that leads to increased bloodshed.

"Governments have become more effective in war, when neither side prevails, escalation becomes irresistible."

Both West Germany and Italy have dealt serious setbacks to terrorist organizations with-in their borders. Embassies and potential kidnap victims are better protected. Airport security, in use in the United States since 1973, has reduced the number of hijackings. The U.S. State Department is now spending 15 percent of its budget to improve security for its people

As governments became more efficient in gathering intelligence and combating terrorism. terrorists adjusted. Their organizations became smaller, making them tougher to monitor or penetrate, and their targets — as with the marines in Beirut - became specific ones aimed at specific nationalities. A decade ago, Palestinians indiscriminately hijacked passengers from many countries, who became their victims in attempts to gain publicity for their cause.

Political hijackings are few these days, as terrorists have turned to hit-and-run tactics rather than trying to seize and hold stationary targets such as an embassy or a parked jetliner. An example is the Armenian extremists, now perhaps the most active terrorist group. They have assassinated 28 Turkish diplomats and their dependents and wounded 100 more in the last seven years.

Paul Wilkinson, professor of international relations at Aberdeen University in Scotland and an expert on political violence, also sees terrorism in general becoming more issue-oriented and less ideological. Shops that sell hine movies in Canada, laboratories doing tests on enimals in Britain, environmental questions in Switzerland, and the scheduled deployment of new U.S. missiles in West Europe - all are issues that provoked terrorist actions.

"The old causes are still with us," Mr. Wilkinson said, "but now we have a whole range of new ones." This in itself will broaden the nature combating terrorism, yet worldwide the prob- of targets and the regions susceptible to attacks. can National Congress in South Africa can

The U.S. State Department lists four nations Libya, Syria, South Yemen and Cuba - as direct supporters of terrorism. "I'm not discounting it, but if you spend all your time looking for the Marxist or the Maoist link, you tend to obscure the importance of nationalism in various terrorist groups. This sort of issue will always persist because very few states are totally homogeneous.

Mideast Violence

Last year, the grand mufii of Jerusalem, Sheikh Saadeddin al-Alami, issued a religious order for the killing of President Hafez Al-Assad of Syria, saying his assassin would be assured a place in paradise. No one in the Middle East seems to find it peculiar that the region's most nominous terror-ist, Sabri al Banna, better known as Abu Nidal, has his own press spokesman, operating openly in Damascus, Syria, nor do people question the contradictions in the interpretation of Islam when political leaders justify acts of violence in terms of God's war against the infidels. Still, said Ali Alfred Huber, "You can't blame violence in the Middle East on Islam any more than you can blame the strife in Ireland on Christianity. It is the society that has broken down, not the religion." Mr. Huber, an Austrian-born university professor here, converted to Islam seven vears ago.

Most Israelis hlame the Arabs for nurturing terrorism. "The Arab world is bittered with broken promises." Benjamin Netanyahu, Israel's deputy chief of mission in Washington, wrote in a Wall Street Journal article. The ongoing inrest in the Middle East isn't generated by the Palestinian problem but by the propensity for violence in the Arah world."

And most Arabs hlame the Israelis. "If you want to discuss terrorism, you have to start with Israel," said Saad Ibrahim, an Egyptian sociolo-

"No, the Middle East is not inherently violent." said Ariel Merari, a terrorist expert at the Center for Strategic Studies at Tel Aviv University. But he adds there are situations that enable terrorism to take root in the region. Sign of World Health

"One is the political fragmentation of many countries," Mr. Merari said. "They aren't really countries at all. Lebanon is the best example. Another is the lack of a democratic tradition in the various regimes, and a third is the constant meddling of the superpowers.

"In many areas of the world, the demarcation line between the superpowers is clear." he added. "Here it overlaps and is fuzzy. The danger of conflict between superpowers is so great in the nuclear era that these countries resort to lowlevel, indirect warfare, which is much less

Experts are uncertain what future course international terrorism will take. Terrorism, they point out, is not an isolated problem but is rather a condition of the world's general health. The possibility of nuclear terrorism cannot be dismissed out of hand, they say. Nor can the possibility of various terrorist groups on different continents firmly forging active alliances.

What they agree on, though, is that terrorism will continue. According to Mr. Jenkins of Rand: "Will it persist? Almost certainly. Will it get worse? Probably. Can we end it? Very un-

Overseas Misadventures Appear to Be Taking a More Ominous Direction

TOKYO — In February, Johannes Viro-lainen, who was then speaker of the Finnish parliament, was preparing to celebrate a birthday at his farm 50 miles outside Helsinki when the ambassador from North Korea arrived.

The visit was not entirely unexpected because for months Mr. Yu had lobbied the legislator, who was then also president of the Interparliamentary Union, in an attempt to prevent the union from holding its next meeting in the South Korean capital of Seoul.

What happened next, however, was unexpected. The bouquet was unwrapped and out tumbled $5,000 in hard cash.

'Detached From Reality'

A Tokyo-based diplomat recalled these de-tails last week and added: "In my experience, the North Koreans seem to be a bit detached from reality.

Friend or foe, it seems to matter not. In the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, North Korea sent fighter pilots to help Egypt. Three years later, two of its diplomats in Cairo were expelled for selling marijuana.

Diplomats Baffled

More recently, North Korea had been extolling its close ties to Iraq, a significant ally in the world's nonaligned movement. It was a good act until 1980 when Iraq abruptly expelled Pyong-yang's diplomats after discovering that North Korea had become the largest supplier of arms to Iran, with which Iraq was and is at war.

Kim Il Sung

Although there is something of a Keystone Kops flavor to some of their antics, there are recent indications of an ominous turn toward terrorism. Circumstantial evidence in Rangoon, Burma, is said to point to North Korean involvement in the bombing there two weeks ago in which four visiting South Korean cabinet ministers and 17 other persons were killed. The bombing probably was aimed at assassinating

President Chun Doo Hwan of South Korea. Mr. Chun also said last week that attempts were made by the North to kill him during foreign tours in Canada and the Philippines although there had been no previous reports in those countries of such plots.

The Great Leader

There is nothing mysterious about the smuggling, bribing and arms-peddling deals in which North Koreans have been engaged since about 1970. These illegal acts are, diplomats say, systematic attempts to obtain foreign currency or to achieve some other goal of the man North Koreans religiously refer to as "the Great Leader," President Kim II Sung.

In part, the smuggling operations are intended to pay for operations of North Korean embassies abroad. Their missions receive a basic support fund from Pyongyang hut are expected to raise additional funds, according to one diplomat based in Tokyo.

Part of the money is used for expensive advertisements placed in foreign newspapers to exult the achievements of "the Great Leader." Excerpts from the ads sometimes are played back over Pyongyang's propaganda radio as evidence of his worldwide renown.

Some of the money also goes back home in the form of foreign-made limousines and other goods which Pyongyang uses to impress visitors from ahroad. One authority said here last week that North Korea recently imported 500 Mercedes-Benz cars to be used to impress foreigners attending a national anniversary celebration in

Signs of Good Life

Abroad, the North Korean diplomats a easily distinguishable in their 1950s-style drab suits and "Great Leader" lapel huttons. But they tend to houry in the choice of autos, and occasionally other signs surface of a pursuit of the good life. In 1974, a Stockholm husinessman reported he had received an order from the North Korean Embassy for five luxury saunas complete with stereos and padded furniture.

By far the most well-publicized venture was a Scandinavian black-marketeering operation in 1976 which resulted in the expulsion of four North Korean diplomats from three countries - Denmark, Finland and Norway. Police had caught them trafficking in duty-free vodka and cigarettes and Syrian hashish.

They had earned about $445,000 in all on the hashish and liquor, police said. The cigarette profits were not disclosed. The duty-free booty was brought into the Scandinavian countries with diplomatic permission hut was amateurishly peddled through small shops.

Accusations of smuggling by North Korean diplomats crop up in many countries. In 1976, the Malaysian government warned North Koreissaries will not discuss it. Pope Confronts U.S. Bishops Over Sexual Doctrine and Dissent Among Catholics

By Kenneth A. Briggs

New York Times Service

OME - Pope John Paul II has been talking to a steady stream of bishops from the United States since late summer, and his principal message has been unmistakable: they must more effectively proclaim church teachings on sexuality that American Catholics have increasingly rejected.

The bishops, paying their periodic calls at the Vatican, have met with the pope in groups, over meals in the papal apartments, and in private audiences. Much of what they have heard from John Paul is about instilling greater loyalty to Catholic moral doctrine. While some bishops welcomed the reminder, others are chafing at it. Most bishops regard the experience, along with other recent moves to examine sections of the American church, as indicating heightened strain between the Vatican and a vigorous American Catholicism that has shown growing These impressions are gained from interviews with more than a dozen key bishops in the last mooth. They are among the approximately 300 American bishops, almost all of whom are expected to visit the pope this year. John Paul, like some popes before him, has worried about the impact of a democratic soci-

The alternative seen by many Vatican officials is that American Catholicism will attain even more of a character of its own, becoming semiautonomous.

He has also emphatically told them not to encourage advocates of ordaining women. The Vatican decreed in 1976 that women could never be priests.

American Catholics have expressed rising disgreement about every subject on that list. Polls show consistently that an overwhelming majority of Catholics approve of artificial contraception. "It is wrong to think that rambunctious American bishops are getting slapped down by a stern pope," Archbishop Roach said during the World Synod of Bishops, which ended Saturday. "He is saying that there are issues he deeply cares about and be wants to work with us

Many bishops believe that the pope especially wants the American church to become a model of fidelity to anthority because of its strategic position within an international superpower and its financial strength.

Ample evidence indicates that John Paul beves the American branch of the church has failed to set a proper example. The extent of the pope's disapproval of what he considers liberal tendencies in the American hierarchy could be indicated in his coming appointments to key posts. Reuter Is Seen as Likely Successor For Prinz as Chief of Daimler-Benz

Analysis expect a smooth management transition at Daimler-Benz, whose chief executive officer, Gerhard Prinz, 54, died of a heart attack

The West German vehicle group's emphasis on teamwork makes it likely that the board will continue to run the company much as it had been run under Mr. Prinz's leadership, said Tim Stevenson, an analyst at the London-based brokerage of Savory Milln.

Some analysts in Germany and Britain look to Edzard Renter, 55, a member of the executive board and chief executive for finance at Daimler-Benz as a likely successor to Mr. Prinz. Mr. Reuter was one of the top candidates in the race to succeed Jeachim Zahn and some analysts were surprised when Mr. Prinz was appointed. He took over from Mr.

It is believed that the supervisory board of Daimler-Benz could meet as early as the beginning of next week in an effort to find a successor for Mr. Prinz. But officials at the company in Stuttgart and analysts agree that, as one put it, "with the quality of people and team approach at Daimler, there isn't any need to burry — the company is running well."

Mr. Prinz took over as chairman of the board of management nearly four years ago and still had 11 years to serve before reaching retirement age. He joined the board in 1974.

Late Rally Lets NYSE End Mixed

NEW YORK — The stock market, plagued most of the day by profit-taking in quality issues, railied late Tuesday to finish mixed in fairly active trading.

IBM stole the spotlight after introducing its long-awaited "Pea-nut" bome computer. Other hightechnology issues also attracted

The Dow Jones industrial average, down 10 points at midsession after rising 1.72 Monday, gained 4.07 to 1.229.27. It bad lost 7.93 for October.

Declines edged advances 875 719 among the 1.963 issues traded. Big Board volume totaled 84.4 million shares, up from 79.4 million

Monday. Several brokers said the late rebound was caused by many myestors replacing borrowed stock sold

Despite the late rebound, Ricky Harrington of Interstate Securines, Charlotte, North Carolina, said that "it is possible the market is in the first intermediate pullback since the bull market began more than a year ago."

Mr. Harrington noted that the Dow average was down about 50 points in the past month "and is just catching up with the rest of the market, which has taken a drubbing since June."

Wall Street was disturbed that the Senate bas failed to pass a measure to lift the U.S. debt ceiling and was unlikely to do so before next week. As a result, the Treasury has had to postpone some auctions, including the beginning of its quarterly refunding program.

Telecommunication Firms Step Up Drive to Sell China Advanced Gear

By Axel Krause

GENEVA — The Reagan administration's move to improve its ties with China has intensified a scramble among large Western and Japanese companies to sell advanced telecommunications and related technology to China.

"The entire Asian market is explosive, but China is of particular interest right pow," said James A. Purdy, senior vice president of ITT Corp. He traced the companies' interest to Washington's effort to liberalize trade relations with China, particularly in high technology, and Beijing's drive to modernize its telephone and telecomn

While exporting civilian and military telecommunications equipment to China and the rest of Asia was a major theme at the exhibition, the discussions reflected the intensifying battle for sales in the global telecommunications market. According to recent industry estimates, the amount spent on equipment alone — primarily in the United States, Western Europe, Latin America and Asia -will rise to more than $88 hillion by 1988 from $45 billion last year.

But because of the crisis in the Middle East and the debt problems of Latin American governments, the markets of Asia, particularly China. represent the most attractive opportunities for many telecommunications companies. ITT sales in Asia have been growing at about 20 percent annually, compared with the company's worldwide average growth of about 6 percent, company executives said. "Among our customers in Asia, China really boggles the mind, considering their enormous needs," said Mr. Purdy, who plans to leave for China in a week to explore new contracts. Last July, ITT won a $250-million contract to install its System 12 digital telephone switching system in China, But ITT is by no means

IBM Introduces Its Long-Awaited Home Computer

NEW YORK - The unseitled U.S. bome-computer industry entered a major new phase Tuesday as International Business Machines Corp. unveiled its long-awaited home computer - the PCjr.

The industry bad anxiously awaited the new machine because it is expected to redefine, or at least splinter, the current $2-billion market for home computers by increasing the prices and complexity of computers used at home.

IBM said it planned to begin shipping the two models of the PCjr in the first quarter of 1984.

One model, costing $669, can hold 65,536 characters in its main memory, can operate two software cartridges and comes with a cordless keyboard that can be used up to 20 feet (about 6 meters) away from the video display. The keyboard uses an infrared system much like the remote-control devices for television sets, but a cord can be used if desired.

131,072 characters, has two cartridge slots and provides a disk drive unit that allows for extra storage of 368,640 characters.

Neither model comes with a Brazil Plan monitor or printer.

The lower-cost model can be upgraded into the enhanced model, IBM said. Most home computers now generally cost $300 or less and bave memories ranging down from around 64,000 characters. The PCjr also has a 16-bit micro-processor that allows it to work much faster than most current home computers, which have 8-bit microprocessors. The home-computer market currently is dominated by Commodore International Ltd., whose position improved even more Friday when Texas Instruments Inc. dropped out of the business after suffering losses of nearly a quarterbillion dollars on its $100 99-4A machine.

NEW YORK - The price of Texas Instruments stock has shot up and the price of its home computer has shot down in the wake of the company's withdrawal from the turbulent home-computer market.

On Monday, the stock market traded nearly two million shares of Texas Instruments, and the per-share price jumped $22,75, to $124.50. Tuesday, the stock rose another $2,50, to $127.

And it appeared that some retailers were unloading the company's previously popular 99-4A home computer for as little as $20 each if huvers managed to get rebates that are to be discontinued by Tevas Instruments.

WASHINGTON --- A financialrescue package for Brazil is almost certain to be approved by commer-cial banks and the International Monetary Fund this month, senior U.S. administration officials said

Commercial banks have been canvassed by Brazil's central bank governor, Affonso Celso Pastore, during a recent world tour in which he tried to line up $6.5 billion of new loans and commitments. Efforts to raise those funds are almost complete, the officials said.

They also said the JMF appears ready to resume paying a previous-ly suspended $4.9-billion loan when it meets Nov. 18.

All other elements of an $11billion rescue package for Brazil depend on the IMF approval. which had been thrown into doubt when the country was unable to force through a harsh wage-indexation law last month.

The wage law was part of Brazil's economic-adjustment program. which it had already agreed on with the IMF.

The officials said Brazil's more moderate wage-indexation measure, which is expected to be passed by the Brazilian congress in the next two weeks, seems acceptable to the IMF

Airbus Likely to Cut Output to 20% Of Capacity by Mid-'84, Official Says

TOULOUSE, France - Europe's Airbus consortium is likely to reduce production to less than a fifth of its capacity by mid-1984 because of the depressed state of The consortium members have the world's airline industry, the general manager of Airbus Indus-trie. Roger Beteille, said Tuesday.

Production of the wide-bodied A-300 and A-310 models will probably slow to three planes a month from the current five because of a drop in demand and delays in delivery of planes already ordered, Mr. Beteille said in an interview at Airbus Industrie headquarters.

He said no decision had been made on whether to proceed with the consortium's new 150-seat A-320 model, for which there are at present 42 firm orders with options on another 38. "The decision still to be made is whether we will bring it to term, or whether we stop it in late 1983 or early 1984 because either the sales perspectives are not satisfactory or the financial means to carry on have not been found," said Mr.

WASHINGTON - The maximum earnings subject to the Social Security retirement tax will rise to $37,800 a year starting Jan. 1; as a result the maximum tax that a worker must pay will increase to $2,532.60, the Social Security Administration has announced

In 1960, the maximum tax-able wage was $4,800 and the tax rate was 3 percent, so no worker had to pay more than $144 a year. This year the wage ceiling is $35,700 and the tax rate is 6.7 percent. That makes the maximum payment $2,391.90 for each worker and for his employer, who must pay the same amount into the Social Security fund

Next year, the wage base will increase by $2,100 and the nominal tax rate will rise to 7 percent, the administration said Monday. However, in 1984 there will be an automatic credit of 0.3 percent, so the effective tax rate will still be 6.7 percent while the manifestation. while the maximum payment will increase by $140.70.

The increase in the maximum tax payable next year will be larger for self-employed people than for others. The effective tax rate for the self-employed will rise from to 11.3 percent from 9.35 percent, including a special credit.

Israel Announces a Temporary Ban

TEL AVIV (Renters) - Israel has acted to halt a drain on foreigncurrency reserves by banning the purchase of foreign currency. The move Monday night came after a renewed rush for U.S. dollars by investors fearing a further devaluation of the shekel, devalued last month

The finance minister, Yigal Cohen-Orgad, said the temporary ban would apply to all Israelis except those going abroad, who would be allowed to buy $3,000 in cash and travelers' checks. The ban does not apply to funds for purchases abroad.

'He said one aim of the move was to prevent the state's loss of interest on foreign currency due to the publie's boarding of cash at home.

CBI Says British Recovery May Slow LONDON (UPI) — Growth in British demand and output may slow slightly in the coming months, but the recovery will not fade away entirely, the Confederation of British Industry said Tuesday. Commenting on its latest quarterly survey of 1,637 industrial companies, the employers' group said: "Looking ahead to the next four months, the results point to demand and output increasing further, although there are now some tentative signs that the rate of growth may be slackening a

The survey's findings also point to continued difficulty in export markets, the CBI said. New export orders are not rising noticeably and British companies' profits are still being curbed by heavy price competitiveness, the group said.

Australian Uranium Project Advances

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Australia's Labor Party cabinet has approved a multibillion-dollar development plan for the world's largest known uranium deposit after months of arguing with left-wing members of the party concerned that some of the uranium could end up being used in nuclear weapons, political sources said Tuesday. The cabinet's decision, reached Monday, will now go before the Labor Party's parliamentary caucus for final approval.

Labor Party policy calls for the phasing out of uranium mining because of its potential for making nuclear weapons. The cabinet, however, decided that there would be no further inquiry into the Roxby Downs uranium-copper-gold project in South Australia.

U.S. Officials to Hold Talks With EC

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - A U.S. delegation, including the secretaries of state, treasury and agriculture, as well as the U.S. trade representative, are to go to Brussels Dec. 9 for talks with European Community officials on trade issues, Agriculture Secretary John Block

Mr. Block told a press conference that the dispute over agricultural trade subsidies will be "the hotest item on the agenda." He also said that when President Ronald Reagan goes to Japan later this month, the issue of access to the Japanese market for U.S. beef and citrus products will be one of the issues on the agenda.

Asked about the recent sale by France of subsidized wheat flour to Egypt, Mr. Block said the United States objects to such sales. "Virtually all of their sales [of wheat and wheat flour] are subsidized. It is another example of their buying markets with their treasury," Mr. Block said.

Ontario May Let Banks Sell Stocks

TORONTO (Reniers) - The Ootario Securities Commission said it has issued a report recommending that financial institutions be allowed to market discount brokerage services.

The commission said the institutions would be allowed into the oew field only under controlled conditions and would be required to be registered with the commission.

The commission said it will recommend to Ontario's minister of consumer and commercial relations that an amendment be made to the Securities Act to put the registration requirement into effect.

Because it is estimated that the leading Japanese companies can make a subcompact car for $1,500 less than Detroit, the profitability enjoyed by Japan's automakers in the United States is unusually high.

The lure of the high profitability of the U.S. market, and the prospect of getting more of it, will animate the coming fight among the Japanese companies for larger shares of the export allocation.

The opportunity comes at a time when the industry's profitability is under pressure, parily due to slower growth in exports but mainly because of the costly fight to maintain and increase shares in the Japanese market. For example, Nissan Tuesday reported that its earnings fell 27 percent in the half ended

Mr. Tsutsumi said that "MITI must be fair and ocutral," in deciding bow the allocation is to be divided. That will oot be easy, as the companies vying for advantage are not only some of the most economically powerful institutions in Japan but also the biggest political

The list of Riva boat owners reads like an international who's who. The style and craftsmanship with which the boats are built at its yards in Lombardy are recognised all over the world as setting the standards by which others are judged.

Thus it's not surprising that this year 70% of the company's entire output will be sold abroad. Like its customer, Riva, Cariplo is also expanding its activities outside Italy.

Contract Is Awarded in Bullet-Train Project

The Associated Press LOS ANGELES - American High Speed Rail Corp. says it has awarded a $1-billion construction contract for a planned Los Angeles-to-San Diego "bullet train" to a partnership willing to make substantial investments and defer their fees on the project. Guy F. Atkinson Co. of South San Francisco; Peter Kiewit Sons' of Omaha, Nebraska, and Perini Corp. of Framingham, Massachusetts, agreed as equal partners in the venture to make an immediate investment of $1 million and another equity investment when funding is secured, a spokeswoman for American High Speed said

The informal consultative committee, known as COCOM, controis strategic trade with Comminist nations and it reviews export-license applications submitted by member countries for their companies. "Before we can proceed with the new rules on China, which certainly will cover telecomunications, we need to consult our trade partners in COCOM," said a senior U.S. government official in Washington. Some of the allies have aiready indicated that they planned to go along, but with reservations.

The new U.S. push on China creates something we do not like in principle —a new category of a so-called friendly Communist coun-try," said a European diplomat with close ties to COCOM. But the official quickly added: "the hightech business there is too important to ignore. We are all agreed on the need to sell to China, and our industries need the business."

Chinese officials said that their requirements included a fivefold increase in the number of tele-phone lines in 28 provinces by the year 2000, noting that there are currently only about four to five telephones for every 100 people.

THE MIDDLE OF MY TETHER

Familiar Essays By Joseph Epstein. 250 pp. $14.95. W.W. Norton, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10110.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

GOT so much pleasure out of Joseph Ep-I stem's collection of essays, "The Middle of My Tether," that I fell to wondering why such collections are not more popular, why it should be a maxim among publishers that most collections won't sell.

If I were to hazard a theory, I would say that readers resist collections because, consisting as they do of many pieces, they require a contin-ual adjustment. One can't just settle down with a single theme but must keep changing direc-tion with the author. Since collections are like an author talking to himself, readers may feel that they're on the receiving end of a monologue, that they're getting too much of some-one else's personality. Even more than the poem or the novel, an essay can be the most personal of all literary voices.

In ecclesiastical usage, the collect is a brief prayer that varies with the day, and I think there is something resembling prayer in certain collections. They tell us how to be good or how to recognize the forces of evil. Certainly Joseph Epstein wrote the essays in "The Middle of My Tether" in this spirit. He confesses, exhorts, mourns and celebrates. He's a cross between a flaneur, or observant stroller, and a streetcorner evangelist.

Like any good writer, Epstein looks closely at the things most of us hardly notice. His first piece is about book dedications, and he observes that male authors often describe their wives' help as "incalculable," while female au-thors tend to call their husbands' part "inde-scribable." What, he asks, is behind this difference of nuance? While discussing fashions in acknowledgments, he wonders whether authors should not name those people who im-peded a book as well as those who assisted in it. Besides being the author of several books, Epstein is editor of The American Scholar. Like any public character, he receives a lot of mall yet he has never lost his romantic feeling about letters. These, too, he thinks, are brief essays in a sense, and he reads them as such. When they praise him, he weighs the praise against the style and the diction behind it. The same goes for attacks. He likes letters because they can be reread: He believes in the second. even the third or fourth look. He thinks that in our shyness we feel able to express things in letters that we cannot say, things like gratitude, apology or love. One of his most curious letters was an offer from someone in Austria to sell-him what had allegedly been George Santayana's wing chair.

Epstein's wittiest piece is about what he calls. the "ephemeral verities," the large clickes of the moment that have none of the staying power of ordinary chiches. "Into each life," he says, "a lot of cliche must fall." In fact, there are times - obitnaries, letters of condolence, funeral orations, for example — when any-thing other than a cliche seems almost uncouth. Among the ephemeral venties, he lists "middle America," "the Establishment," "the silent majority," "identity crisis," "the culture Reache of narcissism" and "the consumer society." He believes that one of the results of higher edu tion is an increase in the complication of our

In his essay on human faces, Epstem says they are one of the great riches of the big city. You can walk in the street and enjoy a landscape of faces, or a library of faces. Comment-. ing on a few famous faces, he says that Truman Capote's face seems dissipated by having been photographed too much. W.H. Anden's leg-cadary wrinkles rendered his face "almost too interesting," like a face turned inside out to show everything behind it.

Epstem's piece on vulgarity is reminiscent of Susan Sontag's essay on camp. While Cyril Comolly called vulgarity "the gartic in the salad of life." Epstein thinks that American vulgarity is losing its primitive savor. It is herometer a "santagarity is losing its primitive savor. It is becoming a "creeping" or "refined" vulgarity that compromises with itself. In an essay defending generalizations, he quotes Karl Kraus's remark that "an aphorism need not be true, but it should surpass the truth." In "The Middle of My Tether," Epstein takes this for his standard. Like any good essayist, he keeps trying to get beyond the truth, into that limbo where literature occurs.

NHL Player Gets 20-Game Suspension For Intentionally Tripping an Official

MONTREAL - Tom Lysiak of the Chicago Black Hawks was suspended for 20 games late Monday for intentionally tripping a lines-man during a National Hockey League game,

Lysiak was suspended by referee Dave Newell under an NHL rule dealing with abuse of officials after he flipped the skates out from under linesman Ron Foyt during Chicago's 6-1 victory over Hartford

Sunday night. Foyl, who had thrown Lysiak out of a faceoff earlier in the game, ordered the Chicago center from the faceoff circle at 15:05 of the second period.

Lysiak skated past Foyt and, with a quick jab of his stick, buckled the linesman's knees and toppled him to the ice.

"It is the first time a player has received a 20 der the rule.

The bottom line is: Thou shalt not touch the official," said John McCauley, the NHL's assistant director of officiating. "As the rule is written, the referee decides whether the infraction is Category 1 (20 games) or Category 2 (three games)."

McCauley said the Black Hawks

er to win in this country.

Eight men won two tourna on Rolf Benirschke's 43-yard field Until the dramatic comeback, the Redskins had intercepted San Diego quarterback Ed Luther six times and sacked him once, causing him to fumble the ball away. The Redskins turned three of the interceptions into 17 points. But they failed to increase their margin as Moseley missed field goal attempts of 44, 52, 47 and 39 yards. In a final-quarter span of 41/2 minutes, Luther, a fourth-year pro who was making his second career start, threw touchdown passes to and wide receiver Wes Chandler (27 yards). Chaodler's score, which closed the gap to 24-21, came with 4:13 left and capped a 99-yard drive. Benirschke's tying field goal

Lights! Camera! Respect!

By Russell Baker N EW YORK — In Washington there was a crisis of respect Men who thought of themselves as men deserving respect met at the White House. "We are men of respect, yet we get no respect," they acknowledged. It was true. Everywhere the world saw evidence of disrespect and laughed and said, "The White House men are paper men of respect." And when it was noted that Jeane Kirkpatrick, who is a member of the group, was a woman, the world said, "And Mrs. Kirkpatrick is a paper woman of respect." It was bad. In the first place it was a bad phrase, a weak variation on Mao Zedong's phrase about the United States being a paper tiger. But Mao was dead, and the world had no great phrasemakers left, but only Margaret Thatcher and men named Helmut and Moscow commissars who, reliving the early days of American television, talked like

John Cameron Swavze. And everywhere disresp npon the face of the globe. In Lebanon the Marines were devastated by obscure sects. In Nicaragua insolent Latin revolutionaries cried "Fie to your gringo ClA!" and preached the doctrine that Babe Ruth was no better than Roberto

In the White House there was lamentation and fear for the future of the race, and they studied the enviable success the old men of Moscow had enjoyed at getting respect for clues about how the thing might be done.

"We could shoot down a big jetliner full of civilians to show the world how nervous and paranoid we are," someone said. This was quickly rejected. The Russians bad already done it. No American man or woman of respect wanted to flatter Moscow by copying its meth-

"Suppose we invade Mexico," was the next proposal. It was just different enough from the Russians' invading Afghanistan to pass for an original idea, at least in a world with a 15-minute attention

The overruling objection? Angry Mexican guerrillas might retaliate by destroying Acapulco, thereby depriving Henry Kissinger of ger than Vietnam. At the mention of Vietnam everybody shuddered. Invading Mexico looked like a "nowin" adventure. What was needed was a "can't-lose" expedition.

"Some place we can conquer and straighten out for democracy in a couple of days so we can show how tough we are without getting bogged down in a real fight" that was the consensus. An island seemed ideal, but Australia was ruled out because it was too hig and Coney Island because after the conquest the president might be expected to go there for a trium-phal ride on the Ferris wheel.

That's when when attention focused on Nantucket. Only 15 miles long and 3 miles wide, it could be mopped up in a few days. The Pentagon could persuade Martha's Vineyard, Block Island and Cape Code to form a Northeast Tourist Resort Defense Alliance. The alliance would ask Washington to belp it invade Nantucket and stop the ernment there from infecting the rest of the area with a danger ous philosophy that all streets should be paved with cobblestones.

Dangerous? asked the presi-

There may be some students from the Rhode Island School of Design on Nantucket. We would certainly want to rescue them from an island where their cars are being shaken to pieces by a government that makes them drive on cobblestones," said Secretary of Defense Weinberger.

The president's mind wandered as it often did since the release of "The Right Stuff." Wouldn't he need a new movie of his own to wage a successful re-election campaign? Something with the flavor of the great Southwest, starring somebody like the late Warner Baxter as the young Reagan. There would be the sound of mariachi music. What was that great mariachi sone?

He hummed softly as the National Respect Council awaited his decision. Ah, that was it - "Gra-

"All right," said Secretary Weinberger, "let's get cracking on this right away." And so we had the Grenada war, and Nantucket still

The Chaotic, Deadly Highways of India

By William K. Stevens New York Times Service

EW DELHI - The Grand Trunk Road, one of India's historic thoroughfares, is a major national highway as important to the northern part of the country as, say, Interstate 95 is to the eastern United States. The Grand Trunk, however, carries a daily traffic chaos that dramatizes the clash between traditional India and the new modern nation.

On one particularly lethal stretch near this capital's northem outskirts, normal traffic involves passenger cars whizzing along past bicycles, which in turn dodge around carts pulled hy smartly trotting horses, which must somehow get around more slowly moving tricycle ricksbaws, which must in turn contend with rubber-wheeled carts pulled by plodding bullocks.

Three-wheeled motorized rickshaws, two-wheeled motor scooters, motorcycles and mopeds dart in and out of the parade. Pedestrians cross the highway at will, often seeming not to look. Occasionally a cow wanders into the

Into this chaotic stream plunge speeding buses, some listing and in obvious need of maintenance, so full of passengers that some hang off the outside. They are accompanied by burtling trucks, the terror of the roads.

As India evolves into an industrial nation, it is acquiring a reputation as having the most dangerous roads of any major country. Every day, on the average, about 75 Indians are killed in traffic accidents, and more than 300 are injured. More than 26,000 people died on Indian roads in 1981, the latest year for which complete figures are available. That is roughly half the number of traffic deaths in the United States. wrong side of an undivided roadwhich has nearly 40 times as many motor vehicles.

Four times as many people die in traffic accidents in Delhi than are murdered. Five times as many in the religious strife that appears to be endemic here. Twenty times more people die in traffic accidents than are killed in an average year during the floods that are the scourge of rural India.

Traffic heading north from Delhi on the Grand Trunk Road. are increasing, since the number ping somewhat as some measures of control begin to be feit, the of fatalities per accident is rising. The statistics show the problem is total of eccidents, deaths and inworst in northern India, where, authorities say, driving habits are particularly reckless. A recent analysis by the police in Delhi, whose traffic patterns typify the problem, suggests that the mismatch between types of vehicles is a major cause of fatalities. Trucks and buses were found to be involved in roughly half of all accidents, though they account for only about 10 percent of all vehicles nationwide. Most victims, on the other hand, were pedestrians, and riders of scooters and motorcycles.

Scooter riders are particularly vulnerable, and the danger is often compounded when a whole family - father, mother and perhaps three children - zips through traffic on a single two-

Plain economics, in fact, is the root of the problem, the experts Newsoapers often report the say. As explained by K.K. country of scarcity: there are few of them, they drive longer and they get more tired. Bus drivers, similarly, are made to cover a. route in a certain timespan, "so the driver has a tendency to speed up," Paul said. Furthermore, he added, truck and bus owners typically skimp on maintenance, leaving unroadworthy vehicles to ply the streets.

Licensing procedures are not followed because of lack of personnel. Almost anyone can buy a license and there are few drivertraining centers. Then there are too few traffic policemen to enforce traffic regulations.

Roads are too few, or too narrow, or in too serious a state of disrepair to handle the traffic demands. In short, the volume of traffic has grown so fast that the support services have not been able to keep up. There were more than four million registered mo-tor vehicles in the country in 1980, the latest year for which figures are available. That is more than double the number 10 years earlier, and the total is still grow-

Prince Andrew, 23, is often a target for celebrity-seeking picture-takers. But he had a chance to turn the tables Monday, when the royal photographer Notman Parkinson showed up at a Mayfair art gallery expecting to take pictures of Andrew Instead, with the prince in on the surprise, Easton Andrews, the trievision host of the British version of "This is Your Life," crept np behind Parkinson and an-nounced: "This is your life!" The prince later joined an audience of 600 et the Royalty Theater for the show and led the applause and laughter as an American model, Carmen del Orefice, whom Parkinson had once photographed onroller skates, fell as she tried to repeat her skating fest. "I hope I don't get involved in one of these again," said Andrew with a smile as be left the after-show party.

It might have happened in America's Old West, but it was in England Monday that three actors, including Paul Scotleld, were injured in a stagecoach actident. Scotleld, were an organized to be staged to the stage of an Oscar for field, 61, winner of an Oscar for best actor in 1966 for his role in "A Man for All Seasons," was hart during the filming of "The Shooting Party" in Amersham, about 15 les west of London, when the coach overturned. He was hospitalized for rib and leg injuries. The actors Edward Fox and Robert Hardy suffered minor injuries.
